

Trisha Chakrabarty, MD, FRCPC

Dr. Trisha Chakrabarty is an assistant professor in the Department of Psychiatry at the University of British Columbia, Michael Smith Foundation for Health Research Health Professional Investigator, and consultant psychiatrist at the Mood Disorders Centre of Excellence at UBC Hospital. Her research focus is on the etiology, contributors and functional implications of cognitive dysfunction in depression and bipolar disorders, as well as the development of novel therapeutic strategies to address mood related cognitive deficits.