

Dr. Andrew Yang completed medical training at the University of Alberta and underwent core internal medicine training with the University of Saskatchewan at the Regina site. Afterwards, he completed his general internal medicine fellowship in Saskatoon, with extra training in the treatment of substance use disorders in Vancouver and Edmonton. He currently works primarily providing in hospital assessment and treatment of admitted patients with substance use disorders with the Rapid Access Addiction Medicine (RAAM) team based out of St. Paul's Hospital in Saskatoon.